THE WHY

OPPORTUNITIES FOR ALL

The Jobs of the Future

Equity in CTE programs means removing barriers in order to allow ALL students access to quality instruction, resources, and the experiences necessary to take that next step towards college and career readiness. This ultimately helps every student graduate and successfully transition into the workforce, military, or more education.

FUN FACT!

Research suggests that participation in CTE programs may improve students' academic and workforce outcomes. A study of three states—Florida, Kentucky, and Indiana—found that earning a credential is associated with an increased likelihood of high school completion. Furthermore, participation in CTE programs increases the likelihood of community college enrollment and college completion.

NOT SO FUN FACT!

A Hechinger Report/Associated Press analysis of CTE enrollment data from 40 states reveals deep racial disparities in who takes these career-oriented courses.

CONCLUSION

Black and Hispanic students benefit less often from classes connected to higher-paying careers and college degrees. The first nationwide look at racial breakdown of CTE confirms the deep divides. (hechingerreport.org)

“It shows that we have a lot of work to do. There are a lot of historical challenges to overcome in how Black students, in particular, interface with CTE dating back decades to when there was segregation in programs.”
